

CC3N holds copyright for materials available on our website (www.cc3n.org.uk) and printed materials unless otherwise stated. These are subject to UK copyright law. All educational materials are the intellectual property of the CC3N.

CC3N is however keen that the educational resources should reach as wide an audience as possible and be used for the purpose they have been developed, which is to support development of critical care nurses and underpin academic programmes of study for this speciality.

It is permitted to download paper copies of the National Critical Care Framework Step Competency documents and use the materials free of cost. However it is not permissible to use any of the materials to generate income and may not be distributed in any form for profit.

Where Higher Education Institutes wish to use the framework to underpin post registration critical care modules they are permitted to do so.

The materials may not be modified or altered in any way for use in critical care. However, other specialities who wish to use elements of the framework that are relevant and/or transferable to their area may do so providing acknowledgement and reference is made to the original source.

Neither CC3N as a non-statutory organisation or any individual contributor to the educational materials accepts any responsibility for loss, damage or injury incurred or caused to others, by any individual or group using this competency framework.

Date: May 2016